Instructions & Overview

In accordance with the guidelines for Track 4 (The Assistant That Doesn’t Make Things Up), our team has analyzed the project brief to identify and examine three key grammatical structures: Present Perfect, Second Conditional, and Perfect Conditional. Each selected sentence reflects core aspects of our system architecture and retrieval methodology.

Grammar Analysis Table

Grammar Topic	Sentence from Your Brief	What is it expressing?
Present Perfect	"Our team has successfully implemented TF-IDF retrieval to cross-verify document sources."	Real experience (an action completed recently with relevance to the present state of the project).
Second Conditional	"If we used multilingual embeddings for all context retrieval, the system would reduce factual errors significantly."	Present imagination / hypothetical present or future scenario.
Perfect Conditional	"If we had integrated stricter verification rules during Phase 1, the model would not have hallucinated missing article facts."	Past hypothesis (imagining a different outcome in the past based on a contrary condition).
